CONDITIONS OF SALE

1. Any bid which is merely a nominal or fractional advance may be rejected by the auctioneer, if, in his judgment, such bid would be likely to affect the sale injuriously.

2. The highest bidder shall be the buyer, and if any dispute arise between two or more bidders, the auctioneer shall either decide the same or put up for re-sale the lot so in dispute.

3. Payment shall be made of all or such part of the purchase money as may be required, and the names and addresses of the purchasers shall be given immediately on the sale of every lot, in default of which the lot so purchased shall be immediately put up again and re-sold.

Payment of that part of the purchase money not made at the time of sale shall be made within ten days thereafter, in default of which the undersigned may either continue to hold the lots at the risk of the purchaser and take such action as may be necessary for the enforcement of the sale, or may at public or private sale, and without other than this notice, re-sell the lots for the benefit of such purchaser, and the deficiency (if any) arising from such re-sale shall be a charge against such purchaser.

4. Delivery of any purchase will be made only upon payment of the total amount due for all purchases at the sale.

Deliveries will be made on sales days between the hours of 9 A. M. and 1 P. M., and on other days—except holidays—between the hours of 9 A. M. and 5 P. M.

Delivery of any purchase will be made only at the American Art Galleries, or other place of sale, as the case may be, and only on presenting the bill of purchase.

Delivery may be made, at the discretion of the Association, of any purchase during the session of the sale at which it was sold.

5. Shipping, boxing or wrapping of purchases is a business in which the Association is in no wise engaged, and will not be performed by the Association for purchasers. The Association will, however, afford to purchasers every facility for employing at current and reasonable rates carriers and packers; doing so, however, without any assumption of responsibility on its part for the acts and charges of the parties engaged for such service.

6. Storage of any purchase shall be at the sole risk of the purchaser. Title passes upon the fall of the auctioneer's hammer, and thereafter, while the Association will exercise due caution in caring for and delivering such purchase, it will not hold itself responsible if such purchase be lost, stolen, damaged or destroyed.

Storage charges will be made upon all purchases not removed within ten days from the date of the sale thereof.

7. Guarantee is not made either by the owner or the Association of the correctness of the description, genuineness or authenticity of any lot, and no sale will be set aside on account of any incorrectness, error of cataloguing, or any imperfection not noted. Every lot is on public exhibition one or more days prior to its sale, after which it is sold "as is" and without recourse.

The Association exercises great care to catalogue every lot correctly, and will give consideration to the opinion of any trustworthy expert to the effect that any lot has been incorrectly catalogued, and, in its judgment, may either sell the lot as catalogued or make mention of the opinion of such expert, who thereby would become responsible for such damage as might result were his opinion without proper foundation.

Panel: Height,  $10\frac{1}{2}$  inches; length,  $19\frac{3}{4}$  inches

THE gray walls and towers of the magnificent Château de Pierrefonds, built in the Middle Ages but in part fallen in ruins, was faithfully and accurately restored by the great French architect and archaeologist, Viollet-le-Duc, and stands to-day as one of the finest historical monuments in all France. This picture was painted by Corot before the restoration, which was not fully completed until some years after his death. The interior mural painting was also restored under the direction of Viollet-le-Duc. In this fine, very beautiful picture by the great master, Corot, the château is seen near the right center of the middle distance, with a hillside to left. The foreground and general landscape over which the eye passes to the château is composed of a meadow, with trees on the right and on the left, diversified by some cows pasturing, a small figure, and a river. The sky shows exquisite tints of gray, and the whole picture is a Corot landscape of very high class. Too much praise could hardly be given to it. It was painted, according to Robaut, at some time between 1860 and 1865.

INSTRUCTING HER CHILDREN IN ARMS*

1000 20 Height, 25½ inches; length, 35½ inches Holland Gallery

CLOTILDA, wife of the great Clovis, the first Christian king of France, was the daughter of the king of Burgundy. Her mother and father had been assassinated by her uncle, who had caused the latter to be stabbed and the former to be drowned with a heavy stone about her neck. Their daughter brooded upon revenge, until the death of the great king, her husband, left the care and education of her sons entirely in her hands, when she bade them think with bitter hate of the foul wrong that her uncle had done her and avenge the death of her father and mother. The education which she addressed herself to giving them was calculated to this end. They are shown in the picture practising with the axe at a target of planks in the open courtyard of the palace, which is built in the Roman style. The mother, seated on her throne in the center of the composition, with the solemn symbol of Christianity drawn in large lines on the walls behind her, gazes with pride and infinite sadness in her haughty and determined face at her gallant boys, qualifying themselves for the work of a bloody retaliation. At the extreme left of the foreground an old warrior, the instructor of the warlike little princes, leans with an arm upon his ponderous shield and watches with grave satisfaction the exhibition of his pupils' prowess. The queen's women are grouped behind her; on her left is a group of ecclesiastics, and the other side of the composition is filled in with royal guards and court dignitaries.

This painting is the work to which the artist owes his first success. It was painted previously to his settlement in London, was exhibited in Antwerp in 1861, purchased by the Antwerp Society for the Encouragement of the Fine Arts, from whose hands it passed into the collection of the King of the Belgians, and at the dispersion of His Majesty's collection was brought to the United States.

THE figure of the prize for which youth and age contend with such unequal weapons occupies the center of the composition in a pensive attitude. On her left, the youthful gallant chants his passion in her ear, between touches upon his mandolin. On her right the aged suitor tempts her with a jewel casket. The costumes are of the later fourteenth or early fifteenth century, sumptuous in material and rich in color. The maiden's face is pure in outline, its youth chastened by gravity. Her dress of pink stuff, with white at the arms and throat, accentuates by its simplicity the richness of its surroundings, and gives meaning to the allegory. The figures are shown at three-quarter length.

By track or trail, save by the wild,
Free children of the wildest wood;
Where stars and tempests have a home
And clouds are curled in mad unrest,
And whirled and swirled by crag and crest.”

—JOAQUIN MILLER.

IN THE golden and crimson splendor of the departing day the great valley is sinking to rest under a coverlet of cloud. The magnificence of the western sunset bathes the towering cliffs and the stream that winds its way between them in a glory of color. The forest, darkening with the shades of evening into mysterious and solemn sombreness, catches here and there a glint of the last rays of the sinking luminary. The waterfall, tumbling in spray from the dizzy heights, flashes like cataracts of jewels, and the whole presents an effect of golden light.

The picture was painted in 1868.

Canvas: Height, 95 inches; width, 82 inches

A GROUP of three whole-length figures of young ladies in a richly wooded park. The eldest, to the right, in gold low dress with brown shawl, is leading a donkey, on which is seated the youngest of the party, in yellow dress and white lace collar; the second sister, to the left, in red low dress, is opening the rustic gate.

"Purchased in London from a picture-restorer who had it in his possession for twenty-five years and who obtained it from the family. It was then stated that the three young ladies were members of a now extinct branch of the Marquess of Londonderry family.

"This fine and imposing group has been accepted as by Sir Thomas Lawrence, and the fact that he painted a large number of the members of the Londonderry family lends color to that claim. No trace has been found to substantiate the Lawrence attribution; and it is quite certain that there would have been some record of a picture of this size and importance if Lawrence had painted it. The probability is that it is the work of Lawrence's assistant, an extremely able portrait-painter who exhibited at the Royal Academy from 1807 to 1843, who was for many years employed by Lawrence in painting the accessories of his pictures and in making copies, and whose work comes so close to Lawrence's manner that it has frequently been mistaken for his."—W.
